NEW RUMANIA DECLARED TO BE IN THE MAKING

Question Is Whether Country Will Turn to Democracy or Dictatorship

ATTEMPT TO STOP MANIU'S POLICIES

BUCHAREST - Observers of Rumanian affairs are wondering today in what direction the country will turn—toward the West or back to the East, toward democracy or toward dictatorship. The lull which has fol-lowed the stormy sessions of Parlia-ment, which closed in mid-summer with only the majority taking part, gives one the feeling that intrigue s in the air. Fair means could not displace a Government elected by the people with an overwhelming vote, and so foul play may have its turn.

A Rumanian statesman said re-cently: "Let them agitate as much as they like, for then I know where they are and what they are doing, but when the noise ceases I am at a

Fascist Plot Discovered But when Maniu's popularity, re-enforced by his pose and good judg-ment, made this undertaking too risky, a so-called Fascist plot was organized to take over the Govern-ment while all were asleep, but the secret came out in time to arrest the known leaders a few hours before the blow was to fall. At the present time one group in particular is crying for a dictator who can put an end to all these brewings of strife and disorder, while old-line politicians are busy trying to create disorder to stop the mward march of the Maniu doctrine

Mr. Maniu is making the neutral observer feel that he is a great impartial judge in the midst of peoples partial judge in the midst of peoples of different race, creed and culture, and one who has only one purpose in remaining in power, and that is to see justice done to all, and to see the country gain its rightful place of prestige in the society of nations, a prestige which had fallen far below par.

Upsetting of Government French Political Crisis Is by the Right Regarded as Paradox

Unsettled sections in China, however, were of real concern to Japan, explained the Minister. Japan's export trade with China amounted to about 20 per cent of the island's total, or second only to that with the United States, which represented nearly 42 per cent.

The increase in Japan's export and import trade with Canada was a matter of satisfaction in his country, of raw silk to the Dominion, valued at 758,000 yen, or approximately $350,000 in 1926 had risen to over 3,000,000 yen last year.

This was his insistence upon new methods for de-termining the education and charac-ter of those seeking admission to the bar. His remarks followed an earlier meeting of the "section on education and admissions," during which at one time the large ballroom was filled with the conflicting shouts of several score of the 500 lawyers present, roaring above the pounding of William Draper Lewis, chairman of the section, who smashed his im-provised gavel in the process of getting order. ment, and standards of admission to the bar. The first topic is now under investigation by a committee of the National Commission. "The law must be enforced, but through lawful methods," said Mr. Newlin. "An examination of our law report reveals that the resort to law-lessness in enforcing, or seeking to enforce the law, is more than casual; in fact, it tends almost to be habitual. The methods used are not confined to the arrest of persons, or to the unwarranted invasion of homes, or to the use of what are commonly known as 'third degree' methods in any par-

HIS beautiful creation is another step forward in our I policy of keeping pace with the rapidly growing tendency of business men towards offices as distinctive and comfortable as their homes.

The Quincy design is characteristic of that vital period in the development of English furniture so well known as "the age of walnut." Desks have quarter-matched butt veneer tops, butt veneer backs, end panels and drawer fronts. Chairs are very comfortable. The finish is Duco and the hardware trimmings are English antique bail cast brass.

Handsome in its simplicity and sturdily built, the Quincy is certain to be one of our most popular period designs. Let us show it to you.

La Follette Leads Senate Attack on Rates Awarded to Powerful Trusts

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU WASHINGTON - When the rate schedules of the tariff were finally reached in the Senate after weeks of ently that in one day only one page of the 275 comprising the list had been disposed of.

Robert M. La Follette (R.), Senator from Wisconsin, in a powerful attack upon the chemical clauses, ieclared that the chemical industry is dominated by three corporations, the Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation, the E, I. du Pont de Nemours Corporation and the Union Carbide & Carbon Corporation, all of which have "long enjoyed extraordinary favors and privileges at the hands of the Government." Instead of being an infant industry, the chemical industry ranks first in the percentage of its profits, even surpassing the steel in-dustry, he declared. "If there ever was an industry able to stand on its own feet and able to meet world competition, it is the American chem-lcal industry."

He charged tariff supporters with betraying the pledge that they had made to the farmers in calling an extra session of Congress. Out of 68 increases in the chemical schedule, he pointed out that 43, directly or indirectly, will increase the farmers' burdens or tend to raise prices paid for articles used by their wives in household duties.

He instanced lithopone, a chemical of which he said few had heard, but of which more than 300,000,000 pounds is used each year as a pigment in flat paints and enamels and as a filler in the manufacture of linoleum and window shades He figured that if one-tenth of the farmers paint their houses and barns each year, the new duty will mean to them total additional expenditure of $2,500,000.

"If, this apparently petty increase on an item that nobody ever heard of, is going to add millions of dollars in the farmers' expenses, it requires little imagination," he added, "to foresee that the aggregate effect of the increases made in the bill are going to leave him in a far worse condition

Dutch Rubber Pool to Stabilize Prices

AMSTERDAM-A meeting of 150 Dutch rubber producers, representing reached in the Senate after weeks of over 41,000 tons of production out of preliminary skirmishes, the chemiical duties were attacked so persist-indian output of 65,000 tons, has voted for a plan for pooling in one year a reserve of 45,000 tons in order to discount in advance the expected rise in prices in 1930, at the same time stabilizing the price in the interest both of producers and consumers

Thirty thousand tons, or 75 per cent, of the production represented at the meeting were pledged to the plan. The committee now proceeds to ascertain the attitude of absented producers, as well as that of British, French and Belgian growers, who constitute 55 per cent of the total output of 150,000 tons in the Dutch East Indies.
After the inquiry, the Dutch con

mittee will make a proposal to British producers. It was particularly stressed in the discussions that the big American consumers who, it was stated, will be willing to co-operate with the producers in order to stabilize prices.

The committee had thought of fixing the minimum at 1s. 4d. Experts at the meeting, after studying the latest statistics, expressed a belief that the production of 1930 would be 820,000 tons and the consumption 850,000.

OLD BAILROAD STATION SOLD TO MAN FOR $50

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR ALBANY, N. Y .- Sale of a railroad station for $50 by the Delaware & Hudson Railroad has just been announced. The station, at Duane, in the Cherry Valley, has been pur-chased by a resident of Duanesburg, and will be used as a residence, after its removal from railroad property.

Abandonment of the station, which has served two small communities since the construction of the main line of the Delaware & Hudson, was permitted by the Public Service Commission, due both to motorbus advance and shifting of a coal business there to another point.

CHAIN STORES SAID TO JUSTIFY WATCHFULNESS

Public Warned to Be Alert Against Possibility of Monopolies

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU CHICAGO-"Chain store development has gone far enough in certain fields to justify watchfulness on the part of the buying public to see that monopoly does not develop." This is the conclusion of Prof. James L. Palmer of the University of Chicago, an authority on marketing and a close student of retail distribution.

Consumers on the whole are too little concerned about monopoly in business, Professor Palmer declared in an interview. Buyers at present seem to be inclined to accept fixed prices without protest and are not "trust-conscious," he said.

It is not that this authority believes that chain stores have already reached a monopolistic stage. He is of the opinion that chains have lowered prices through their own eft-ciency and by forcing independent merchants to meet their competition. However, he sees need for watchfulness. The possibility of monopoly through indirect control he explained as follows:

"The large chains in certain fields are associated with one of three or four banking houses. No one knows number of states have not been sucjust how significant this situation is cessful to date, he said.
from the standpoint of monopoly. One "As long as the different chains

Such a merger seems unlikely to him in the near future because the largest of the chains shows no signs of wanting to combine with others. It is the opinion of Professor Palmer that, in the grocery trade, no danger of monopoly over a wide area exists until a single interest controls a store competition by large scale volume at least twice that of the largest chain now doing business.

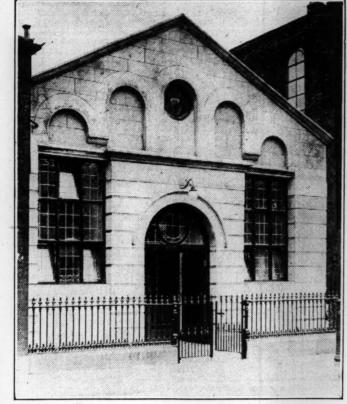

He regards efforts to put the chains out of business, or to check their growth by law, as a waste of energy.
"There is no justification for legislation against chain stores," he said, "unless they are considered socially undesirable. We already have antitrust legislation, which is applicable to the said. islation against chain stores," he said, "unless they are considered socially undesirable. We already have antitrust legislation, which is applicable to chains as well as to other types of enterprise. However, there is very little evidence that the majority of people feel that social institutions."

Professor Palmer points out that the American people have shown a preference for low-priced commodities, even when large-scale operation is the only way in which they can be obtained.

Mutual Comprehension of Problems in Western Hemisphere Needed

PECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO MEXICO CITY-The United States Ambassador, Dwight W. Morrow, is quoted in an interview published here with Dr. Maximo Soto Hall, a prominent Argentine journalist and representative of the newspaper La Prensa of Buenos Aires, as having stated that in his belief only a program of comprehension of each other's problems can result in the solution of problems and issues pending between the countries of the western hemisphere.

To this end the Ambassador is quoted as having stated that co-operation between the newspapers of all countries interested was one of the best means that could bring about a desired better understanding between these countries.

Dr. Soto Hall in reporting his interview with the Ambassador de-clares that the American diplomat stated that the solution of the conflict between the Government and the Roman Catholic Church was one of the most pleasing occurrences during his ambassadorship to Mexico. Is his substitution for real music a success?

F a Mechanical Man played a harp folk would flock to see the curiosity. But few would expect an artistic treat.

And yet, powerful theatrical interests have undertaken to present to the theatre-going public Mechanical Music as a "superior" form of art. The purpose of this advertisement is to invite attention to this attempt and to point out the harm to American culture that may result.

Synchronization of sound with motion pictures has impressed many as a great advance in the cinema field because it has made dialog pictures possible. Taking advantage of this new interest in movies, theatrical powers have sought to go further and introduce a highly profitable economy by substituting Mechanically Synchronized Music for Real Music in theatres.

Mechanical Music takes on no added merit by being synchronized, so it seems fair to say that the "synchronization" exploitation is largely an overstatement of the case. Nevertheless it is upon the synchronization idea that the attempt to "sell" Mechanical Music is based. Amplified phonograph records could have been used just as effectively years before the synchronization devices were perfected. But a "smoke screen," such as synchronization, was required to lend some sort of scientific color to the substitution.

The cultural menace of this movement to supplant Real Music with the flat, savourless monotony of Mechanical Music becomes apparent upon a moment's thought.

In the first place, success in eliminating the living artists from the theatre means the eventual corruption of public appreciation of good music, which would be a cultural ca-

In the second place, reduction of professional musicians to a handful of studio workers would deprive the young of much incentive to develop their talent and to make music their life work.

Machinery is performing great service for Mankind. But a Machine is not an artist. The high purpose of Machinery is to save Men and Women from ignoble and soulless labor, not to perform tasks that are only well done by the hands and hearts of gifted humans.

However perfect reproduced music may be made, it must always fall short of establishing a close contact between performer and listener.

America stands today in the front rank of the Musical World. Our great symphony orchestras excel those of Europe in quality of performance as well as in numbers. And the vast majority of these playtwenty years ago a native American was rare among them. A large share of credit for this condition is due the American Federation of Musicians, which has served to protect and elevate the living standards of working musicians. Our Grand Opera and concert stage lure the world's greatest artists. In the popular music field we have no rivals the world around. America buys each year more musical instruments than all the nations of Europe, demonstrating that our love of music is an active, not a passive, thing.

Against the excellent reasons for preserving and fostering the Art of Music, the destructive advocates of Canned Music can only advance the proposal that there is greater profit for the theatre in eliminating paid musicians.

The dehumanizing of the theatre is scarcely true prog-

There is hatred and distrust which cannot be wiped out within centuries. A Bucharest bank recently established a branch in Transylvania and was Rockland: Church Edifice, Cedar and compelled to change its name before a peasant would patronize it. The attitude of the old crowd in Bucharest has been high-handed, dominant and without any consideration for the people, who were never allowed to express themselves, and who had learned the lesson often repeated, "It's better to bend the head than to have it cut off."

Brockton: Pythian Temple, West Elm Street, 3:30 p. m., Oct. 27. Today, under the influence of Mr Maniu, there is less bending of the head and bowing and scraping and Leominster: Junior High School Audimore attention to serious business. On a recent occasion as Mr. Maniu coming out of his office he noticed several women in peasant garb in the hall waiting and he went individually to each and asked what Somerville: Church Edifice, 148 Syca-more Street, Winter Hill, 8 p. m., they wanted.

Regency Is Impressed

The brilliant Minister of Agriculture is from the ranks of the peasants and was a country school teacher until recently. After his first interview with the Regency, a creation of the old crowd, that august trio expressed their astonishment at his wit and intelligence as if the soil could not breed men!

Rumania is undergoing her greatest change of all time, and unless reaction should come to halt the forward march it will make a new place in Europe for itself. There is an important group of people wondering just which way to turn, follow Manin to a new day and become a part of western civilization or react with the bureaucrats and share the spoils of office. Unfortunately the present Government has been left not only an empty treasury but unpaid and overdue debts to the amount of half the annual budget. To balance the budget and make payments on these debts new taxes had to be levied, the collection of which is no easy task, for those most able to pay have thus far escaped under protection.

Railway Debts Heavy

The debts of the state railways were enormous and upon close inspection it was found necessary to cancel more than a score of categories of people who never paid when traveling. This list has just published and it includes names of a few individuals who no doubt do not like this kind of pub-licity. In the past Rumania has existed for the few, and those rew lived well indeed, as princes, and they were all-powerful. Mr. Maniu is building up a Government combat best people he can get specified by the combat specified by together from the various provinces as well as from the old kingdom, and once he is sure of the army and both branches of the police force, all of which are continually under-going changes, he may act with a more powerful hand. High government employees for the most part are the agents of the old crowd, but many of them are wondering today if they can continue to be disloyal to the state to their own profit. Just now a revision of government employees is taking place, and if it causes no disturbance, and the people yield to

Mass Production to Lift Culture Level, He Tells Dartmouth Men

Much of this progress must come through demands from below, Mr. Filene said. Contented workers no longer to be desired, he said, but men and women who will demand more and more. "The manufacturer of the future will do his best to stir up discontent among employees gen-erally, while he is outlining ways and means of satisfying that discontent." he said.

Mass production does not mean mere size, Mr. Filene pointed out, but rather, "enterprise carried on for the benefit of everybody, instead of for the benefit of a special class."

Turning especially to the young men who made up his audience, Mr. Filene pointed out to them the opportunity which would be theirs in the world of business to render these ideals possible. Hard work would be their portion, he said, and they must resist the forces of tradition. They should expect little assistance even from the leaders of modern business.

Labor Legislation Opposed in Mexico

PECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO MEXICO CITY—Labor employers, as a whole, are now of the opinion that the Mexican labor bill pending Congress, and which aroused intense opposition, will be shelved before the session adjourns on Dec. 31 and allowed to hang over until next year. During this interval much may be done to secure the definite blockade of the law, which, if approved as it reads, would be according to employers, ruinous to both industry and labor.

Success in blocking the measure, if this actually has been done, is generally credited to the most wide spread newspaper campaign ever conducted in Mexico to oppose any proposed legislation, which began early in the Administration of Presi-

"The squad will have no outstanding runner but will be made up of men of about equal ability. In previous years Illinois has usually had at least one extra-good runner, but not so this season," Coach Abbott added.

The only letterman on the squad is S. J. Makeever '30, and he earned his award as a member of Coach Harry L. Gill's track team but not in cross country.

Abbott, Western Conference two-mile champion and a member of the United States 1928 Olympic team, is coaching the Illini in the absence of the veteran Gill, who has been granted a year's leave of absence by the Athletic Council of the University.

The Illini faced their first competition of the season in a quadrangular meet with Northwestern University, Notre Dame University, and the University of Wisconsin over the course at Eyanston, Ill. Coach Abbott took 10 men on this trip, including five seniors, three juniors and two sophomores, They were T. L. Bowes '30, M. E. Denekas '31, P. B. Evans '31, W. H. Feurman '32, N. E. Heikes '30, Robert McDaniels' 30, H. D. Roberts' 32, R. A. Stalnaker '30, P. W. Thompson' 30, and L. V. Tockstein '31.

Other men on the squad, whom Coach Abbott thinks have ability which place them ahead of the other men later in the season, are: R. V. Carter '32, C. H. Eckert '31, Irving Fiddelke '30, L. T. Fruin '31, S. J. Makeever '30, Mike Mackanos '32, and C. J. Scheve '30. The Illinois cross-country schedule is as follows:

BARBUTI SEEKS REINSTATEMENT

NEW YORK (P)—The fast-approaching indoor track and field season may witness the return to competition of Raymond J. Barbuti, Olympic 400-meter champion. Suspended last February for "bringing the Amateur Athletic Union into disrepute," Barbuti's application for reinstatement now is "under consideration" by the registration committee of the Metropolitan Association, A. A. U. The former Syracuse University quartermiler appeared before the committee to show cause why he should be reinstated, but neither he nor the committee would comment as to what transpired at the conference. Definite approval or rejection of the application will be made later by the committee.

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR or peasant carts with enormous wheels, carrying loads of water-melons and driven by dark-skinned Azerbaijan Tartars. Here one has a peasantry, which before the revolu-

The very existence of a Soviet régime in a country like Azerbaijan effort to set up a system based on the rule of the industrial workers, and in the Baku oil-fields, there were few native workers before the revolution and where the poorer peasants were so bound by half-feudal, half-patriarchal ties to the beys and khans, the important men of their districts, 'fiscated land of these beys and khans, on the ground that the Shariat, the Muhammadan code of laws, forbade such appropriation of other people's

The People's Writing

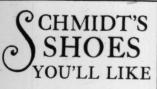

One of the most visible changes in Azerbaijan is in the matter of written language. Everywhere in Baku one sees unfamiliar words in familiar Latin characters. The traditional Arabic script of the Koran has been discarded. This change, which has also taken place in neighboring Turkey and in many Eastern General Assembly countries of the Soviet Union is dictated both by political and by educa-tional considerations. It is a symbol of the new order, of departure from the old state of affairs, when, as a special to the Christian Science Monitor general rule, only the bey and the mullah (Muhammadan priest) could read the difficult Arabic characters and the common man was left in total ignorance. It is stated that literacy has increased from 2 to 20 per cent the introduction of the new more industriclized. The pre-war policy of keeping Azerbaijan and other Caucasian countries largely as feeders of raw material to the Russian factories has been reversed, and new local factories are beginning to utilize silk, cotton and other raw material which the country produces. Aside from the Baku oil wells, which have steadily been expanding their output, a new industrial center has grown up in Gyandzha (formerly Elizavetpol) where a number of new textile mills are functioning. It should not be imagined that the effort to build up a Socialist system in a primitive Asiatic country goes SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR altogether smoothly. Your correspondent's stay in Baku happened to coinwith the new electrical railroad cide with a vigorous "cleansing" of the Azerbaijan Socialist Party, when stories which might otherwise can see, plodding along the dusty have rested on rumor and hearsay road, a line of brightly painted arbas, were, figuratively speaking, being

Apparently the important men of their districts, that in many cases they refused for of Azerbaijan native Communists who, some time to take and plow the conwisted land of these beys and khans, themselves, give little encouragement to their wives to cast off the veil.

It will probably be a long time before Asiatic habits, including the use of office as a means of personal enrichment, are altogether outlived in Azerbaijan. But the changes which the Soviet régime has brought to that country are real and deep, if only because a whole younger generation has grown up under the influence of new ideas.

OW that the "shouting and the tumuk" that followed the showing of the new collections is over and the fundamentals of the winter modes have been established, one has time calmly to consider what the new season has brought forth beside the all-important items of the higher waistline and the longer skirt. And, by the way, the time must surely have been ripe for a radical change in feminine fashions, for never has been seen a new mode so speedily adopted as that which made its appearance in the winter collections. Skirts have dropped and waists have risen almost dropped and waists have risen almost broadcloth in the darker dablia tone over night. as to diminish rather than exaggerate its proportions.

A prominent feature of the new collections, which has survived the change in the silhouette, is the bolero jacket which reaches just below the normal waistline and hangs in a slightly rounded-line at the back of the bodice. This bolero usually ends at the under-arm seams, and the front of the bodice may be slightly bloused or be cut quite plain with a narrow belt at the waistline. mond, hardest of all minerals, can be persuaded to take almost any shape. Not content with this, how-ever, designers of note, like Mauboussin, are constantly experiment ing in order to get new vitality into their pieces, and in this light is the greatest factor.

It was found that a pattern of gems set into a curved piece of metal was vastly more "lively" than the same pattern set flat. The light struck the stones at different angles and was reflected in different ways. From this discovery it was but a step to the next, and today the best pieces show the jewels set at different levels Sometimes the metal itself is shaped ometimes the jewels vary in height; often both devices are used in one piece. The foliage of a tree, for instance, will be represented by closely massed emeralds sunk into the curved platinum setting, the multicolored flowers and fruit projecting almost a quarter of an inch—quite an appreciable height in a hat or a shoulder

Further interest is added by the suggestion of variety in texture. The leaves may be set unevenly to represent the broken surface of foliage: the flowers be in flat-cut stones to show the translucence of petals, and the fruit in cabochon gems to give the correctly smooth and round ef fect. In order to provide furthe contrast, the jeweled tree will probably grow out of a pot of polished onyx or cloudy crystal.

A tree in a pot, or a nosegay of jeweled flowers in a vase of onyx or jade are favorite devices for hat brooches this season. But brooches take a wide variety of shapes, and they sometimes rely on a clever use of perspective for a part of their charm. This is illustrated in the design of a motorcar climbing the brow of the hill. The coachwork is of vivid tiger, which also forms a hat brooch, shows exquisite workmanship and an accurate knowledge of anatomy; indeed, he is so wonderfully modeled that he almost seems to quiver. And interesting scene, far beyond what how many remember that a certain famous novelist of a century ago, one Sir Walter Scott, wrote an essay "On Ornamental Plantations and Landscape Gardening" and that in this statement however. "We do not mean to say that the expense was altogether well laid out which was necessay he made a spirited plea that essay he made a spirited plea that gether well laid out which was a sessay he made a spirited plea that essary to bring the waters of the gardening be considered among the ton was just then trying out. Scott visited Allanton, was straightway intrigued by the scheme, and later sent to the Quarterly Review, instead of a mere report, a story of the vicissi-tudes which gardening in general has passed through, and a comment nobles, even if they did not lose True, the "grand manner" in which Scott begins his essay seems oldamusement which a country residence offers to its proprietor, the improvement of the appearance of the house and adjacent demesne will ever hold a high place." But the thought, after all, is in line with our present-day trend of thought, and thought, after all, is in line with our present-day trend of thought, and as surely as in any of the other arts, we are immediately won to him. Very shortly in his discourse Scott readily agree with him that Walpole confused the garden proper with the confused the garden proper with the chase or park. Whereas, Sir Walter urges, the park has always had a character of its own and one that did not change the garden has been alid not change the garden has been did not change, the garden has been opinion, comes about through the ina gradual growth from the small to live huddled together behind castle walls it was possible for the pleasOf the three materials with whi walls it was possible for the pleasaunce to become more spacious and as it grew spacious new forms of decoration were introduced. Sometimes there were fountains, sometimes canals, sometimes even "banqueting-houses and terraces connected by elaborate staircases and balustrades." Such an evolution from such an origin makes a degree of artificiality in a garden excusable, explains indeed, Scott points out, why a garden is so positively "the child of art."

Of the three materials with which a gardener has to deal, earth, water, and trees, Scott discusses at length. And he advises expending the greatest amount of effort and expense on the trees. Changes of earth, whether of the making of great terraces, or for simulations of mountain or plain, he considers to be rarely practicable, explains indeed, Scott points out, why a garden is so positively "the child of art."

HARRY I. HUNT Publishers' Agent 107 Falmouth St., Back Bay Station BOSTON, U. S. A. Many New Lows Established in Moderately Active Market

NEW YORK—Sensing the reluctance of buyers to follow stocks up and with of buyers to follow stocks up and with the aid of the elimination in yester-day's up rush of much of the short interest, the bears returned to the attack today and found the market vulnerable. Starting out by crushing weak stocks here and there and helped along by the liquidation in Bethlehem sellers soon had virtually all stocks in full retreat shortly after Opening prices were moderately higher but the market showed little inclination to go ahead. Selling was at its worst in the late afternoon, at its worst in the late atternoon, and the majority of active issues were at or below the low levels reached day before yesterday.

Trading volume was larger than yesterday, amounting to around 5,000,000 shares, but the market was notable of the lock of huying inpulse rather.

to the selling side. Public utility issues were again hard hit, weakness extending from American Telephone on down the line and investment trusts suffered severely.

At the worst, losses of 5 to 10 points were numerous and some of the higher priced shares, such as Adams Express and Auburn Automobile, drowned from 20 to pearly 100 points. dropped from 20 to nearly 100 points. Bankers Bills Off

Undoubtedly the most significant development of the last 24 hours has been the weakening of rates on bankers bills. Late last night and again this morning dealers announced a cut of one-eighth of 1 per cent on various maturities, and it is supposed that the Federal Reserve Bank, which reduced its buying rate on bills last August as an offset to the increase in the discount rate, has cut its buying rate

The asking rate on 90-day bills is now 5 per cent contrasted with a 6 per cent discount rate. Ordinarily such a spread would mean an early drop in the discount rate to 5½ or 5½ per cent and an early cut in the rate is anticipated in most quarters.

Just how the stock exchange manages to put call money renewals at 6 er cent when so much cheaper money s around is not quite clear to the layman. The opening rate this morning again was 6 per cent, but at noon the usual reduction to 5 per cent was announced. Quotable rates on time money were unchanged, but the tone ployment over the next three months throws light on the banking view of the future of money rates here. French currency was but slightly affected by the news of the Briand Ministry's all.

Another firm market was that for bonds. Railroad issues pressed forward, but the rise in Government obligations was less noticeable. Foreign issues hardened. Commodity markets, on the other hand, followed the share market to lower levels. Cotton failed to hold its improvement on news of Government. improvement on news of Government assistance, and liquidation in wheat. which usually follows heavy selling of

Prices and Loans

Mr. Mitchell of the National City Bank and others point out, to little is understood about brokers' loans. Quite apart from the influence of new capital issues on the loan total, the effects of price changes in the market are sometimes rather obscure. Weekly publication of brokers' loans by the Federal Reserve Board has been going on for nearly five years. Publication of these figures has proved helpful in putting an end to wild surmises, if nothing else. However upsetting to speculative sentiment a weekly report speculative sentiment a weekly report of a large decrease or increase may be, people fear the unknown.

Wall Street, in spite of its five-year experience with brokers' loans, seems to expect a weekly decrease in loans automatically to follow a week of declining prices, and conversely an increase in loans to come with rising prices. On numerous occasions, however, even when new capital flotations and when issued stock were not factors, loans have risen when prices declined, have declined on advancing prices or have remained stationary while prices either were climbing or falling. Quite clearly the popular theory of the relation of loans to stock fluctuations is an erroneous one. fluctuations is an erroneous one.

Business Indicators

For the second week in succession railroad freight-car loadings have fallen slightly under the total of a year ago. For the week of Oct. 12 the reduction amounted to 11,735 cars. In every month this week preceding October, railroad traffic has been higher than the corresponding months. higher than the corresponding months of last year, and it is virtually cer-tain that the year will bring a larger

All the loss last week can be accounted for in reduced grain and livestock loading, doubtless the direct result of the drop in wheat prices. Less than carload lots of merchandise freight loadings were higher than a year ago. While the freight traffic picture is one of moderate reduction in activity, it is by no means a portrayal of substantial business recession.

Bethlehem Steel's Decline The dumping on the market in the late trading yesterday of large blocks of Bethlehem Steel did much to bring about the closing recession. This morning, after preliminary trading was out of the way, the selling of Bethlehem Steel was renewed. The selling was traced to members of the underwriting syndicate.

For the purpose of retiring $110,-000,000 of bonds, Bethlehem offered to shareholders 800,000 shares at 110. Presumably the issue met a market rather sumably the issue met a market rather stuffy with new issues. Rights to subscribe expired last Monday, and if the view that memebrs of the syndicate had to take up a lot of stock is correct, it is easy to understand why some of them wished to sell the stock while they still had a show of a profit. Until last night's break the stock was selling above the issue price, and making allowance for syndicate's customary two or three points commission, there was a chance for the quick actors to make a small profit.

actors to make a small profit.

Whether Bethlehem cut the market a bit too close with its offering is a matter of disagreement in Wall Street, out undoubtedly it came a bit late in the season. The affair emphasizes the point that this market has been stifled with new stock offerings.

Net for nine months grantle figure in the procession of the caution previously had been causing some anxiety in the market.

There is a tendency of the cautious to hunt bargains, but suggestions that stocks as a whole have touched ground are discouraged. Under present conditions the market is very susceptible to any temporary release of pressure, and the rally in New York was seized on as an opportunity to put prices better.

Gilt-edged issues were consistently strong and funding is now $5.15 parts.

The general tendency of the money market was unchanged. Day loans at 5 per cent were in ample supply. Three months' commercial bills were 6 1-16 per cent, and Treasurys were resold down to 6 per cent. Not only are the British banks and investment trusts free lenders of short money, but a significant feature is the offering of New York banks to place here substantial sums for three months' deposit.

Koussevitzky Again as Contrebassiste

CERGE KOUSSEVITZKY made one of his rare public appearances as player of the doublebass on the evening of Oct. 22, in Symphony Hall, Boston, in a recital for the benefit of Elizabeth Peabody House and the Travelers Aid Society. He was assisted by Fraser Gange, baritone, Pierre Luboshutz, piano 21/2 accompanist, and a detail of about 15 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Richard Burgin, concertmaster.

Dr. Koussevitzky renewed the admiration stirred by his two previous performances in Boston for his virtuosity, his taste and his musical imagination. The incredibly cello-like quality of his tone, the variety and justice of his shading and color, the delicacy of his phrasing, the facility of his execution, the surprising purity of his harmonics once more our wonder. An occasional minor lapse of tonal quality was easily accounted for by the fact that the weather was not propitious for strings.

For one listener at least, the most satisfying playing was in two num-bers in which Dr. Koussevitzky had been heard previously in Boston: his transcription of Bruch's "Kol Nidrei" and the player's own Concerto. The Koussevitzkyan transcription of Mozart's Concerto for bassoon (K. 191) was not impressive, partly perhaps because in the opening slow movement the artist yielded to an excess of reticence and to a temptation to meticulousness. The cadenza, written by Koussevitzky, was distinguished for display at the expense of beauty.

The Mozart aria, "Per questa bella mano," for baritone with double-bass obbligato with small orchestra, became in performance an exercise for the double-bass with accompaniment of voice and small orchestra. This effect was not due to any effort of Dr. Koussevitzky to overemphasize his part in the proceedings; indeed, he did his share modestly enough, 92% though his dexterity was in itself was attributable to the eager selfthe fact that Mr. Gange's voice and style were ill-suited to the music allotted to him.

Mr. Gange showed his real quality in Brahms' "Four Serious Songs," which he sang with powerful dra-matic effect. Mr. Luboshutz provided matic effect. Mr. Lunosiments at a illuminating accompaniments at a L. A. S.

Then, leaving college. he plunged into the newspaper world of New York City. For a time he was reporter on a Newark paper, for a time wrote regularly for the New York Tribune. Then, when he was 20, he finished his first novel and pub-lished it at his own expense. Greatly encouraged by the approval of several literary men, notably of William Dean Howells, Crane continued to write, and in 1896 his "Red Badge of Courage" appeared simultaneously in London and in New York. It brought him almost immediate fame. "The Red Badge of Courage" is an incredible book, coming as it did from such a young writer, and, too, one who had never seen a battle. With an intuition clear and sure, Crane entered into the heart of a sensitive youth in the throes of his first battle. Perhaps Stephen Crane took the place out of his love for change and variety. At any rate, he found himself in the center of a literary colony. Crane loved to ride and his horse could easily cover the distance to the homes of Henry James, H. G. Wells, Joseph Conrad and Ford Madox Ford. His later years were spent in Eng-land, a land which satisfied the crav-

The "Consumers' Counsel"

TN THE course of its tortuous and dilatory progress toward enactment, the tariff bill seems to be picking up a fine assortment of barnacles. The latest is the unprecedented creation, by an overwhelming vote in the Senate, of an office to be called "The Consumers' Counsel of the Tariff Commission of the United States." The incumbent of this office is to get a salary of $10,000 a year, reduced from the original appropriation of $12,000. Even the larger sum was, of course, quite below any fair proportion to the importance of the functions to be exercised-that is, supposing they could be exercised at all-for this Consumers' Counsel is intended to be the representative of the great mass of the American people before the Tariff Commission. It is for him to keep a sharp eye on such maneuvers for the increase of the tariff as have been recently experienced in the course of the investigation into lobbying conducted by the Senate. Terrible thought! Suppose some senator with the influence and the astuteness of Mr. Bingham of Connecticut should get the secretary of the Manufacturers Association appointed Consumers' Counsel? And why not? Stranger things have been done in the formation and enforcement of tariff laws.

Everybody in the United States is a consumer. Everybody to some extent pays the tariff either because of purchase of imported goods or by the payment of higher prices for protected goods of domestic manufacture. But the great lot of us are not merely consumers, but producers as well, or beneficiaries, more or less, of actual producers. Henry Ford is a great producer, though, it happens, one who seeks no tariff protection. But his tens of thousands of workmen and agents and their hundreds of thousands of family dependents have quite as much interest in legislation which protects and stimulates production as they have in regulations for the protection of the consumer. The Consumers' Counsel in some way or another has got to identify his clients. It will be no easy task.

Annually the Consumers' Counsel must report to Congress what he has done. Always when Congress is not in session he is supposed to be the representative of that body before the Tariff Commission. If the flexible clause shall ultimately be retained in the law, the Consumers' Counsel will have among his other duties that of persuading by facile argument the President to use his power always in behalf of the consumer. Of course, the President appoints the Consumers' Counsel, who will hold his position at the pleasure of the Executive. But this fact is not supposed to militate against his singleminded devotion to his millions of clients.

Just whence proceeded the demand for the creation of this new and difficult federal position is not generally known. It would, of course, be foolish to look upon it merely as another evidence of the desire of politicians to create highsalaried jobs. Probably it is fairer to look upon it simply as a gesture by which the Senate hoped to divert public attention from a measure which seems to become more unpopular almost daily. A very ineffective gesture it is, because the most cursory consideration of the position in which this official will find himself must convince anyone that the chances of his exercising any influence or authority advantageous to the mass of consumers are exceedingly small.

Wanted: Trained Music Teachers

RAINED teachers of music, by official remark of Prof. Hollis Dann of the New York University School of Education, are demanded in the public schools of the United States. Not, indeed, teachers routined in a pedagogical method, but teachers disciplined thoroughly in the theory and practice of the art of tone and academically accredited. More positions stand ready for music instructors holding college degrees, according to Professor Dann. than men and women to fill them. As for his observation of matters, no longer do high school pupils merely go to the assembly hall of their building once a week to sing, regardless of their interest or capability in song. Rather, they have regularly organized courses, with chance for learning to play upon instruments and even to do that which leads to composing, besides opportunity for studying musical history and æsthetics.

Under such changed conditions, the supervisor of a former time whose preparation consisted of work in a summer institute, scarcely answers the requirement. The one, that is to say, who has no particular capacity except to apply a scheme of drill which some ingenious classroom mechanic has devised and elaborated, seems little wanted around the schoolhouse of today. Nor does the one, probably, find his system always desired who conceives the task from a purely doctrinaire viewpoint, holding that all music is melody or that all music is folk-tune or any other single aspect of the universal manifestation which it proves.

Where the impetus for the new activity comes from, Professor Dann ventures not to indicate. He would be little likely, however, to declare that it originates in university administrations, even though he comments on the acceptance of music in the college curriculum almost everywhere. Small encouragement, truly, the American college president gave to music in the past, and what he has given of late seems in many a case to be not so much voluntarily bestowed as hesitatingly conceded. So perhaps the drive begins below and proceeds upward. The school child wants music, and music he will have. The college student, all the more. Then, as to teachers, only the trained sort fill the bill now; and that untrained sort-they may have sailed on the wrong tack, but they held bravely to the

"Selling" One's Way to College

WERE one to peddle orchid-colored frying pans and prove to a housewife by actual demonstration that they would cook an egg into a breakfast delicacy with greater certainty than would the old black spider hanging behind the kitchen stove, and then help the housewife to see that her purchase would be a straightforward business transaction, that would be good salesmanship. But were one to go up and down the streets of a city to peddle milking pails, pleading with business men to buy them because otherwise one might not be able to procure a certain little skyscraper he has his eyes on down town, that would not be even poor salesmanship, but a begging for charity. Yet this latter enterprise would be little different from the extensive canvassing and selling that have been embarked upon by thousands of college boys and high school boys all over the United

People living within a convenient radius of a university are sometimes called to their doors as many as six times in one day to find boys trying to sell something that few people really want, but which they are prevailed upon to buy so that the boy may pay his way in college or "earn a scholarship," as it is often described. There are seasons when people are greatly annoyed by this practice. Respectable men and women are often heard denouncing it. Also, high school boys are frequently set the task of selling a specified large quantity of an article in order to total a commission high enough to pay for athletic equipment. Pressure is occasionally brought to bear upon the boys by publishing the names of those who succeed in selling and by jeering those who do not. Other methods equally questionable are common. Little thought seems to be given to whether or not the articles sold are wanted or worth the money. Instead, the money itself is the thing, and sentiment or sympathy is the basis from which the boys make their plea for transaction rather than 'value for value.

Intelligent adults are protesting, though as yet only to one another, not alone against the doorbell annoyance, but because they believe youth is thus being taught something unsound from the standpoint of business ethics. Many would rather be asked outright for a contribution, for that would at least be straightforward On the other hand, the boys are doubtless desirous of giving something for the money received. The next step may well be to encourage them to sell goods that are worth something to the purchaser and to sell the article because it is a fine thing to sell-else the boys' morals may severely suffer. To a large proportion of these boys this particular selling is their first business venture. It is all-essential that it be wholly straightforward.

Some Pigskin Musings

CUSTODIANS of ticket turnstiles report that on a certain Saturday afternoon in one section of the middle West two streams of spectators—nearly 150,000 in all—thronged through the gates to find their places in the grand stands that they might witness two widely advertised football games. Of this vast company, a large percentage consisted of those who had never attended college, but had been attracted to this most typical of academic enterprises by the sheer joy of the game. Football, the country over, continues to be one of the most spectacular and dramatically interesting pastimes on this whirling globe.

But, somehow, one wonders in this day of football ascendancy if, perchance, the sport is not usurping the place of other unifying and valued influences that once stood at the center of college life and gave it a truly campus atmosphere. The guild of the scholar in medieval times was characterized by its familiarity with the Latin tongue, and Latin hymns in some colleges today-even though uncertainly mumbled by undergraduates-hark back to those spacious days when zest for learning struck the high note in the academic scale.

Another strong bond of unity, one capable of binding many scattered interests and pursuits into a firm bundle of loyalty and intellectual purpose, was none other than the college convocation or chapel, now abandoned in many larger universities for a variety of reasons.

The football stadium, it seems, has now become the popular and unifying rendezvous of the college population and of all the townsmen and alumni able to secure tickets. In this concrete immensity, heads are bared when the college band strikes up an anthem for Alma Mater. Strident cheers volley at intervals across the gridiron in the direction of deserted college halls. All this is vastly thrilling, but is it not somewhat unrelated to more worthy objectives of college life? We wonder.

Manchuria's New Home Industries

STEADY development of household industry in north Manchuria is reported by the official Chinese Economic Bulletin, which regards this development as the foundation of large-scale industry in this new country, now being rapidly populated by Chinese immigrants from other provinces.

Although a considerable time may elapse before foreign capital is invested heavily in Manchurian factories, and while Chinese capital is not sufficient for great manufacturing developments at present, these small household enterprises are already showing what Chinese workers can do under pioneering conditions with virgin land and untouched resources at their disposal.

It is being demonstrated that this district is not only promising to agriculturists, but has great possibilities as a manufacturing center, since deposits of coal and iron ore have been found in proximity to each other and to rail and water ways. Hundreds of thousands of colonists provide the necessary labor, and the Manchurian Government is extending the system of railways to open one of the richest areas in the Far East.

About one hundred different kinds of manufacturing are now being done. To a certain extent, says the Economic Bulletin, the standard of living in this region is high and labor is better paid than in other parts of China, because when the Chinese Eastern Railway was built twenty years ago, and no labor was then available in Manchuria, workers were recruited from Shantung at high wages, establishing a standard which has been kept intact till the present. The Sino-Russian dispute, while affecting the border towns on the Siberian frontier, is not seriously interfering with the development in Manchuria proper, and south Manchuria, in the zone of Japanese protection, is showing no signs of any economic disturbance due to international affairs.

"Mussolini's American Empire"

THE remarkably zealous and widespread activities of the Italo-American Fascists have lately been causing increasing concern in the United States. Not that there is any fear that Premier Mussolini may extend his Fascist empire to the North American shores, but rather a growing apprehension lest Il Duce's energetic efforts to retain the allegiance of Italians who have emigrated to America should handicap their necessary naturalization, and perhaps on more occasions than are yet apparent deprive Italo-Americans of certain of their rights as citizens of the United States. Already the vigorous methods with which the Fascists have sought to press their program in the United States have not only prompted non-Fascist Italians to protest to Washington, but have caused the Department of State to mention the matter to Rome.

Specifically, it is a complaint of numerous Italo-Americans, who wish either to remain aloof from the politics of their former homeland or who dissent from the Fascist program, that, notwithstanding their residence in the United States, and notwithstanding the fact that they may be citizens of the United States, they are subject to boycott and intimidation. Such complaints are the basis of the protest which was made to the Federal Government a few months ago-and such complaints prompted Marcus Duffield, a New York newspaper man, to attempt a first-hand investigation of the varied activities of the Fascist League of America and other Fascist agents who report directly to the Italian Government.

Contributing his findings to the current issue of Harpers Magazine under the suggestive title, "Mussolini's American Empire," Mr. Duffield submits as facts that Italians resident in the United States are being unjustly taxed by the Italian Government, that Italians either indifferent or unsympathetic to the Fascist régime frequently suffer economic boycott, that their relatives in Italy are made insecure in the event that their American kin are not obedient to Fascist orders. He submits that even American citizens of Italian extraction upon returning to visit their homeland are forced into a period of military service and that some are not even permitted to return to the United States.

The oath of allegiance to which Italians living in America are sworn is also not without interest. In part it reads:

I swear on my honor: To serve with fidelity and discipline the Fascist idea of society based on religion, the Fatherland, the family, and to respect the authority of the League and of the hierarchy and the tradition of our race.

To love, serve, obey, and exalt the United States of America and to render obedience and respect to its Constitution and its laws. . . . To submit to the discipline of the hierarchy of the Fascist League of North America.

The section of the foregoing oath which urges obedience to the Constitution of the United States is much appreciated, but when those lines are compared with the pledge to serve with fidelity and discipline the Fascist idea of society, it may be fairly pointed out that the Fascist idea of society is quite different from the American idea of society, and that to serve the one is very likely to disserve the other.

Whatever interest the Government of the United States may rightly have in these circumstances, obviously it concerns neither the merits nor the demerits of Fascism. It rather concerns the truth or falsity of Mr. Duffield's rather shocking discoveries, and the right of Italo-Americans to go about their daily business without molestation for their political opinions. Political liberty is one of the most cherished attributes of American society, and it should be enjoyed by its citizens and its residents of whatever racial extraction.

Antoine Bourdelle—Humanitarian

TT MAY easily be that posterity will realize as little | peculiarly his own. And he never relaxed his handgrip; as have the majority of his contemporaries the extent to which Antoine Bourdelle was humanitarian as well as creative artist. The teacher they have known and will know; likewise the kind and constructive critic, the artist whose works have adorned many an exhibition and been acclaimed in many a land, coworker with Rodin, upon whose shoulders the mantle of that master justly fell. But humanitarian? Perhaps that side of a man's characterparticularly when he belongs to the public-is manifest to his intimates alone.

The key to the hearts of his fellows, which Bourdelle fingered with a touch as sure as that which grasped the scalpel, lay hidden in the memory of his own start in the world. Even when supreme in his success, he retained an appreciation of the viewpoint of the novice. He had been among them not so long ago. For, in the little town of Montauban, away in the south, the elder Bourdelle was an expert workman in his way, a cabinetmaker far too painstaking to earn much gold to go into the family coffers.

Bourdelle the younger used to recall that day, in his fifteenth year, which launched him on his career. Coming home one night, he found his father and mother seated at table, waiting for him, keeping his meal hot. Antoine was hungry and eager, the scent of onion soup was grateful yet something held him back. Intuitively he felt that his parents had eaten nothing. Then and there he resolved to set about earning his living and theirs. And this mental attitude of consideration for others was one of his chief characteristics. When the winning of a competition put him in funds to go to Paris, the parents went with him. Latterly, when urged to keep a motorcar for his own use, he would refuse bluntly. "Il y a toujours des personnes qui n'ont pas de potage," spake the tender peasant in him. 1 1 1

Neither could he be persuaded to give up his teaching, though the time and energy which it demanded might well have been devoted to his own ends. Under Bourdelle, in the two schools in which he taught for years, sat pupils from all over the world, whom he delighted to encourage and direct. No pains were too great. For his interest and belief in the potentialities of youth were unbounded. Acting in the capacity of vice-president of the Salon des Tuileries, he erred consistently on the side of favoring new painters and sculptors as exhibitors, rather than those of established reputations. Hours he would spend in examining their work, searching for marks of merit. And if he found them he, if no one else, would support those artists by buying their pictures or their busts. Literally, there were hosts who looked to Bourdelle for inspiration and for practical advice.

There was, for instance, a young Serb whose artistic ambitions had led him to Paris. He was just gaining a foothold when the French authorities, complaining that his papers were not in order, demanded that he leave the country. Bourdelle heard of it in his studio, threw down his tools, pulled off his apron, sent his assistants flying in all directions in pursuit of a taxi. He would not rest until he had besieged an army of officials in their strongholds. exacting from them a promise that the young man should be unmolested. Many a man of genius, having mounted the pinnacle, is reluctant to look back, inclined to brush aside the amateur with hasty or insincere words of praise. But the instant Bourdelle's protection and guidance were appealed to, he was fired with an eagerness and a generosity it must be the other man who did that.

While Bourdelle was of the people and among them as their friend, he lived strangely apart from the so-called Bohemian quarter of Paris. With him nothing mattered except work, work, work. In discussing with his pupils their common art and his, he strove to lift their thought to perceive the true province of the artist-to cultivate and appreciate all that is finest and best. There is, he held, no justification for the catch phrase, "ignorant as an artist." An artist was not permitted to be ignorant. He was not simply one who shook off conventions and restraints to do and think and live precisely as his inclinations dictated. On the contrary, much was demanded of him. For to be an artist involved the loving of everything good and beautiful, the shunning of all the rest.

Artists in other fields frequently sought Bourdelle's judgment of their work. Authors would send him their books to read; never a day but several packages arrived Indeed, he was interested keenly in everything and in everybody; and his enthusiasm was felt. He seemed to possess some talisman which brought him at once into touch with men and their problems. Courageously he plunged beneath the surface and detected the core. Perhaps that was the secret reason for the success of his portrait busts: that he so understood his subjects. As he protested frequently, he listened for inspiration, for an inner voice. There was about him an engaging directness, a simplicity, an earnestness as wholesome and mellow as his own peasant soil of France. Yet sometimes his family and friends found him a little stubborn; that is, when they desired that he should change his mind.
As, for example, in July, 1914, when he had gone into Alsace to make the bust of an eminent physician who lived there. Bourdelle, the task being complete, declared that he must return to Paris on a certain day, by a certain train. They reasoned with him. He knew little of Alsace, had seen nothing of the countryside. Probably he would not soon come that way again. Why not linger a few days, pleasantly? As yet, there was no hint of a World War and no one could or would explain the presence in the railroad station of armed troops. Bourdelle would go that day and he did. Only later was it disclosed that he and Mme. Bourdelle had left by the last train out of Germany. Had they lingered, they would have been detained four years as hostages in Alsace.

It was his dream that one day he should have his own museum in Paris, as has Rodin. There has been talk of his friends building him such a museum upon land which the state should donate. Bourdelle had more than enough works to fill it. He had even drawn his plans for the building, awaiting the day when they should be carried out. He planned that the central, the all-important feature should be an auditorium—a sort of glorified studio or workshop-to which anyone might come for practice and instruction. Bourdelle himself meant to work with them

Now that he is no longer present, one can only hope that his vision of the museum will take tangible form: that it will house his works and be in the highest sense a people's museum-a place where they will come not only to admire the exquisite loveliness of art, but to labor and learn how to express what is in their own hearts. Nothing could more fittingly preserve the memory of Antoine Bourdelle, artist and humanitarian. M. W.

Who Pays and What For?

To THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: But a few years ago our national expenditure was well under $1,000,000,000 annually. Now billions are talked of and lightly voted by our representatives at Washington. Are we getting our money's worth? If so, how? Moreover, who foots the bill? In 1917 we took a very active and costly part in a "war to end war." Today President Hoover tells us we are spending more for warlike purposes than any European country. He adds that unless disarmament parleys realize their mission, we shall in 1933 be saddled with an outlay of $803,000,000, as against $266,000,000 before fighting that fight to "end war." Moreover, this is in addition to some annual $800,000,000 in caring for war veterans, etc. Why cannot world statesmen accept wisely General Grant's dictum, "There never was a time when, in my opinion, some way could not be found to prevent the drawing of the sword'

This Terrible Dry Law!

To THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: Recently there have appeared in the Monitor two articles, "Benefits of Dry Law Attested by Visitor" and "Vivid Contrast Shows Benefit of Prohibition," the reading of which has impelled me to write of my own recent

In April a friend and I made a rather extended motor trip to the Pacific coast. We had spent a good part of our lives in the West around gold-mining camps and in border towns and cities near the international boundary line between the United States and Mexico. Both of us have very vivid recollections of the countless horrors that were the product of the open saloon. From boyhood to young manhood I had been a frequent visitor to the saloons in the company of my father, so have at first hand the knowledge of just what the saloon meant. Most people know that along any international border is the favorite congregating place for the renegades from both countries. Murder and suicide as a direct result of liquor were of very com mon occurrence. I personally knew both good (?) and bad bartenders and knew their families. On our trip we drove 14,000 miles, through 19 states, through hundreds of centers of population all the way from mere crossroads villages to some of the largest cities in our country, and we were in the good and the bad sections of these cities, in them at night as well as in the day, workdays, Sundays and holidays. During that entire trip saw but two men who were noticeably under the effects of liquor. One was a lad of about 18 whom we saw on a waterfront street in San Pedro, Calif. The other, a man of perhaps 25, I picked up along the road in western Massachusetts. In the hour the latter rode with me he related a long tale of woe, every bit of it due directly to the effects of drinking which had its beginning in South Boston.

In our travels we revisited many of the towns and cities where we had been in the pre-prohibition days, and it seemed to us that no sane person, unless he were totally blind, could possibly fail to see the vast improvement in all these places over what they were in those other days. It has always seemed entirely beyond my comprehension that thinking, well-meaning people should dare to assert, as they so frequently do, that the evil effects of liquor are as bad or worse now than before prohibition. To me this is as unbelievable as it would be to believe that there is no more light at noonday than there is at midnight

"Let Prisoners Do More Than 'Time'"

To THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

Your editorial "Let Prisoners 'Do' More Than 'Time.' in the issue of September 26, struck a responsive chord in my heart. I had long intended to write to you and ask you why you did not start a campaign for sane and humane treatment of prisoners in our penal institutions. It seemed to me that such a movement would be worthy of the Monitor's great influence and prestige. I have many times said to people that the only reasonable way to handle so-called criminals was not to punish them, but to educate them and teach them the means of making a respectable living for themselves when they had finished their "time," so that they would become valuable members of the community instead of an economic and social burden and menace. The answer always was that goods made in prisons would come in competition with union-made goods and would work a hardship on free laborers. Your editorial has supplied me with the answer to that objection, for which I am very (MRS.) AGNES B. CHAMBEBLIN. Cody, Wyoming.

The Eagle's Last Stand

THERE has been appreciation of the fact that the num-1 ber of bald eagles on American soil is diminishing. But the danger, now announced in a pamphlet compiled ornithologists of the American Museum of Natural History, that the bird which stood as a model for the coat of arms and coinage of the United States might become extinct, has not been fully understood. The fate of the passenger pigeon, once one of the most common of feathered Americans and now utterly extinct, does not yet stare the eagle in the face, for there is a possibility that the strain can be saved, but nine species of birds are given as beyond rescue. Fifteen others, the eagle among them, may be preserved for the generations to come.

When it is learned that species like the flamingo, the California condor, the trumpeter swan and the whooping crane are definitely lost, there should be no lack of effort to save the threatened birds. Alaska is really the last stand of the bald eagle .- Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

Popularity of the Bible

OVER 11,000,000 copies of the Bible were sold last year U in more than 130 languages. . . . When people deride the average of popular taste in things literary there is this complete answer-that the world's best book is also the world's best seller. Nor will it ever be otherwise. Humanity would have to be pretty well degraded out of existence before the Bible loses its hold. To every mood. to every motion, to every varying phrase of the mind and the soul, it makes its unfailing appeal. There is in it all the drama and beauty of life and all the wisdom that men have learned on earth.

The King, as is well known, begins each day by reading chapter of the Bible. It is the most fortifying preparation for the day's work that anyone could embrace. Yet there and to whom it is only familiar in the guise of some outworn quotation. They are the poorer for their abstinence. They are denying themselves the richest treat of philosophy, experience and spirituality that has ever been spread before the race of men .- Daily Express (London).

Unnoticed Inventions

WE become accustomed to thinking that the great advances the world has made in the last fifty years are almost wholly due to mechanical inventions and scientific progress. But we are wrong. Mechanical things help a lot, out the inventions and progress made in ordinary business are equally important. There have been just as great inventions in banking as in electricity; there has been as great an advance in merchandising as in electricity. It is always the flashy, striking things that catch the eye and get the glory. To our way of thinking it is just as im-portant and valuable to find a new and better way of handling money or of merchandising carpets or of distributing books as it is to invent a loudspeaker or an airplane.—American Boy-Youth's Companion.

The Dead Sea's Wealth

THE Dead Sea is thought by scientists to cover more I wealth than might be found in any other like area in the world. Its deposits of potash, magnesium and bromine salts are declared to represent billions, and now a new group of authorities estimate that $50,000,000,000 worth of gold could be recovered from the waters by the use of modern scientific methods. . . . The Dead Sea may be the livest thing we have.—Los Angeles Times.
